

EDISON HOPES TO SEND MEN TO JAIL

Wizard Bitter Against Heads of the Concern that Used the Name of His Son to Do Business.

WILL SPEND LAST DOLLAR TO PROSECUTE.

W. Newton Bennington Declares He Will Carry Case to Highest Courts, and May Form New Company.

The business of the Edison, Jr. Chemical Company, of New York, is at a standstill to-day, and will probably remain at rest, as long as the decision of the postal authorities, under which all mail arriving for the company is withheld, remains in force. Big stacks of letters and money orders, addressed to the company, and now held at Post-Office Station P, in the Produce Exchange, have been marked with the letters "Z D," indicating that they are not to be delivered. In the offices of the company, No. 14 Stone street, everything was quiet. When seen at his real estate office No. 52 Broadway, W. Newton Bennington, the actual head of the company, said the trouble was only temporary and the company would soon be on its feet again. He asserted that the company had not been fairly treated and that there was absolutely nothing questionable about the concern. The whole trouble, in his opinion, had been caused by the fact that young Edison had become reconciled to his father and had not given the slightest hint of his intention until he sent in his resignation as vice-president.

Named for C. M. Edison. Mr. Bennington explained that the Edison Chemical Company had been originally named after C. M. Edison, young man, in no way related to Thomas A. Edison. The latter, however, had forced the company to abandon that name by obtaining an order of the court. The concern was finally absorbed by the present company.

Mr. Bennington did not deny that the vitalizer sold by his company was merely a dry-cell battery worth about $2.50, while the company charged $8 for it, but said that was merely a matter of business and did not justify the withholding of the mail.

Thomas A. Edison, the father of young Edison, whose name has lent artificial lustre to the Edison Jr. Chemical Company, when seen at his cement works at Hightstown, N. J., spoke freely of his son and his connection with the chemical company. "Ever since some horse traders conceived the idea that I should build an electric track for their pigs," said the inventor, "to enable them to sell them above their actual value, I have been troubled and haunted by confidence men, but in all my experience I have never had such a time as now."

Tom's Shortcomings.

"Tom never saw one of his confederated cure-all magnets outside the shop where they are sold. He never made one, and he couldn't make one if he wanted to. He couldn't build a fence. He wouldn't make a liver pad. If he has any inventive talent I never have discovered it. The boy could never be induced to attend school, because he wished to become famous and wanted people to say of him that he had never been in a college. "I mean to send the men who use my name illegally and for business profit to prison, if possible. I will spend the last dollar I have in prosecuting them, if necessary."

WILD YARN OF BOMB IN BOTTLE

No Truth in Stories that Admiral Rodgers Feared Explosive at Launching of the Connecticut.

TOO RIDICULOUS TO DENY, SAYS THE CONSTRUCTOR.

Admiral Coghlan Explains How an Effort Was Made to Entrap Him Into Making Statement on the Subject.

Officials of the Brooklyn Navy-Yard in interviews with an Evening World reporter to-day brand as unmitigated falsehoods the many fanciful stories published about the fear of Admiral Rodgers that a bomb had been placed in the bottle of wine with which the ship was christened and that Assistant Naval Constructor Robinson, terrified by threats on his life, was guarded by a Secret-Service man. Mr. Robinson said: "It is so ridiculous that I don't feel like dignifying the stories with a denial. There have been no threats on my life or person and there has been no letters sent me. In no conceivable way have I been threatened. As to the bottle episode, that Admiral Rodgers held the hand of Miss Welles to prevent it striking the vessel out of fear that it contained a bomb, that is just as ridiculous. The bottle of wine was brought to my office a day or so before launching and was put in a silk cover. It was carried to the vessel by a man under my orders."

Lieut. Chadwick, first aide of Admiral Coghlan, commandant of the yard, had this to say about the workings of the sensation builders: "A newspaper called up the office yesterday and asked me to tell Admiral Coghlan that Admiral Rodgers, who is now in Washington, had written over his signature that he was afraid the bottle contained a bomb. A statement was wanted from Admiral Coghlan. This is what I replied: "If I allowed my leg to be pulled in that way I'd lose my job."

the skipper of the barge, the other two men, were the only persons on board the Tampa, which is owned by the Tracey Bros., No. 1 Broadway. The men were enjoying a sociable game of cards in the captain's cabin when the fire started. The cause of the fire is not known, but it is supposed that a match carelessly dropped or sparks from the pipe of one of the card players set fire to some hangings in the cabin. The fire was seen by persons on the shore and an alarm was turned in. When the firemen reached the deck of the barge they found Capt. Gartman badly burned and unconscious near one of the hatchways, and the woodwork of the cabin fiercely burning. Not until the flames were extinguished and the firemen entered the dismantled cabin did they discover that the other two men had perished in the flames. Their bodies, burned to a crisp, were lying on the charred cabin floor. Capt. Gartman was taken to the Long Island College Hospital and the doctors have little hope of his recovery.

FATALLY STABBED WHILE SKYLARKING

George Crawford, who is known among his fellow-laborers on the east side as "Big George," is dying in Gouverneur Hospital from a knife wound he received to-day while skylarking. It is said, with Joseph Schuster, a lumberman, of No. 187 Lewis street. The two men were in a yard between Nos. 185 and 187 Lewis street, and, according to the police, both were under the influence of liquor. Friends say they saw them trying to pull each other's shirts off, and then they saw "Big George" fall. When the police reached the spot Crawford was seen to be in a serious condition, and the coroner was requested to obtain a statement from him. Detectives are searching for Schuster.
